Key to Guided Reading Levels

Throughout the complete title listing section of this catalog (pages 17–37) Guided Reading Levels (A–Z) are provided to assist you in selecting the most appropriate titles for young readers. All levels are established by guided reading specialists, working closely with literacy programs nationwide.

Our criteria for Levels A–Z correspond with the criteria outlined in Matching Books to Readers and Leveled Books for Readers by Irene C. Fountas and Gay Su Pinnell (Heinemann).

All levels are approximations and are subject to revision.

Written by Peter Benoit

Look! Up there! In the tree! Is it a bird, a mammal, an insect? From the highest part of the rain forest to the deepest part of the ocean and the various places in between, this series explores the world's ecosystems and the fascinating and bizarre creatures and plants that live there. Each book features facts from freaky to fascinating, and photos of creatures rare and wonderful. You'll learn about the dangers each environment faces from humans as well as nature, and what we can all do to help preserve these beautiful, unique worlds.

Bottom of the World
 Life on the Antarctic tundra tends to cluster near water. Most of Antarctica is covered with ice fields. It is too cold and dry to support plants or animals. The rocky Antarctic Peninsula, though, supports lichen, moss, and algae species. Two flowering plants called pearlwort and hair grass also grow there. Large animals such as seals and several kinds of penguin live at the shore. So do petrels, albatrosses, and other seabirds.

Krummholz is a German word that means "crooked wood."
 A krummholz tree

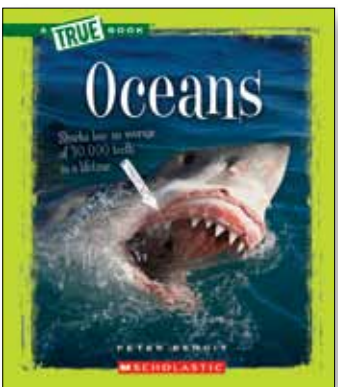

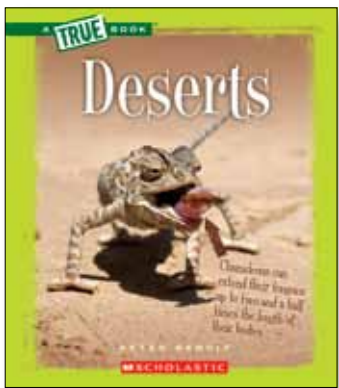

Land of Crooked Wood

Alpine tundra is found on mountains. Small plants grow in alpine tundra ecosystems because the soil thaws and drains well. Dwarf trees twisted into fantastic shapes by the freezing winds are found at the tree line boundary. Scientists call the dwarf trees krummholz.

Alpine tundra is home to plant eaters such as sheep and mountain goats. Large, fur-bearing squirrels called marmots also live there. Grasshoppers and beetles thrive in alpine tundra, too.

Albatrosses have large, hooked bills, which they use to snatch food from the sea.

America at War

Written by John Perritano

NEW SERIES!

From the sounds of dive-bombing planes to the heat and bugs of the jungle to the feel of sand in your eyes and throat, you'll experience some of the major wars and conflicts of the 20th century as though you were there as you read these authoritative titles on America at war. Through detailed descriptions and historical photos of key battles, the fear, excitement, horror, and elation of war are brought to life. You'll meet the heroes and villains behind the battles and wars, the brains behind the technology, and the people waiting at home, wondering if their loved ones would return.

America at War—New Series

$8.95
 32 pp., 6 3/4 x 9 1/4, full-color and black-and-white photographs
 Ages: 9–11, Grades: 4–6

From the suns of dive-bombing planes to the heat and bugs of the jungle to the feel of sand in your eyes and throat, you'll experience some of the major wars and conflicts of the 20th century as though you were there as you read these authoritative titles on America at war. Through detailed descriptions and historical photos of key battles, the fear, excitement, horror, and elation of war are brought to life. You'll meet the heroes and villains behind the battles and wars, the brains behind the technology, and the people waiting at home, wondering if their loved ones would return.
