Animals do amazing things in these new readers!

Scholastic Reader Level 2: Animal Disguises For some animals it pays to be brightly colored and highly noticeable, especially if it frightens away a predator. However, some animals prefer a different approach: hiding in plain sight. This reader provides a basic introduction to animals that use camouflage. It shows how many animals—in the air, on land, or under the sea—use their camouflage to either evade their enemies or hunt their prey. Whether they're blending in with their environment or looking like another animal altogether, their survival depends entirely on how well they can play hide-and-seek.

Fiction

Prisons, poisons, and passions combine in a gorgeously written fantasy noir.

Liar's Moon As a pickpocket, Digger expects to spend a night in jail every now and then. But she doesn't expect to find Lord Durrel Decath there as well—or to hear he's soon to be executed for killing his wife. Durrel once saved Digger's life, and when she goes free, she decides to use her skills as a thief, forger, and spy to return the favor. But each new clue only opens up more mysteries. While Durrel's marriage was one of convenience, his behavior has been more impulsive than innocent. His late wife had an illegal business on the wrong side of the civil war raging just outside the city gates. Digger keeps finding forbidden magic in places it has no reason to be. And it doesn't help that she may be falling in love with a murderer...

Fiction

A roaring, supernatural adventure that spans New York, and the globe!

Sound Bender After their parents' plane goes down over the ocean, Leo and his brother Hollis are forced into the custody of their rich and enigmatic uncle Crane, a dealer of rare and probably illicit antiques. But almost as soon as he's settled—or as close to settled as he can get in the bleak Brooklyn mansion, surrounded by his uncle's dubious staff—Leo receives a mysterious package his father put together long ago, to be opened on his thirteenth birthday. With the package, Leo discovers he has an amazing ability. He can hear the history of any object by touching it. But when Leo finds a strange helmet buried among his uncle's artifacts, and hears a pained cry coming from it, a mystery unravels as to its origin.

From Sound Bender

We were in front of a dilapidated one-story factory building. On its roof was a giant sign with a picture of a half-eaten salami that said "Finkelstein Family Salami Factory, Established 1931." I was so busy staring at the place, thinking about all the disgusting things that must be going on in there, that I didn't notice our car had made a U-turn and pulled up in front of a filthy brick building that took up the rest of the block. It stretched seven stories into the sky with hundreds of windows that were so grimy they looked totally black. The only color at all came from a flock of ratty white seagulls perched in the crevices of the brick. Stump turned off the ignition and popped open the trunk. Hollis glared at me. "Leo, you said . . ." The rest of his sentence was drowned out by my own thoughts. Please, don't let this be the place. Please make this all go away. Please, Mom and Dad, come get us. Now! Hurry! Please . . . My mind was screaming but my face was still. The only movement I allowed myself was a sideways glance at the building. Painted in inconspicuous silver letters were the words, "Crane's Mysteries." Crane. Uncle Crane. Oh no. Stump got out and held the door open. "Out with you, kiddo. And get the little guy. The boss don't like to wait." I took a deep breath. The smell of salami was everywhere. I held my hand out for Hollis and pulled him from the back of the limo. "Come on, chief," I said to him, trying to sound reassuring. "We can do this." This was it. This was home.
